Advancement Through Achievement

When one walks along a long road, there is some strange force which is present at each marker. This unexplainable force causes the traveler to turn his head to look back at the long ribbon of dust behind him. But the wanderer never stops; he simply turns his head to see his footprints in the dust and to see the past which was at one time the future.

Lane has gone on that trip, and with it on every step of the way went the Lane Annual. At each step Lane progressed, the Annual progressed with it. For the sublimation of a thing is the sublimation of its output. The real products of this school are the boys made men through their years well spent here; but this Annual is also an output of the institution because it is by the students about the school and its students.

Lane is looking back at the road, that long obstacle-filled ribbon of dust, for it has reached a milestone. In a sense, each year is a milestone, but the one just reached is the largest marker yet passed. So too reflects this publication, because it has reached the same milestone. Lane Technical High School is fifty years old, but it is not celebrating fifty; it is celebrating a hundred. Why? The institution, the efficient, productive organization, is fifty years old, but the most important thing about it has remained the same: the success of graduating men. The thing that makes Lane such a good school, the thing that makes it worthy the School of Champions, the thing that makes Lane what it is now, is celebrating its hundredth anniversary.

The Annual is also looking back; it sees the same footsteps. It knows that Lane has been made better through the years; its foundation is stronger. It knows that it itself has also been made better. Each time an issue rolls off the press, it is as good as it can be made, yet each time it is better than the last. The reason that it is better is because its subject matter is better. Its subject is LANE. . . .

As our Society became more and more mechanized, the need for scientists and technicians grew at an enormous rate. In addition, with the decrease in the percentage of farm dwellers, youngsters were learning fewer and fewer mechanical skills. To serve this double purpose, it was decided in 1905 to build a school that was more than just a vocational school: the Lane Technical High School. Vocational schools merely instruct in manual skills, whereas the technical school relates these skills to engineering and mathematics, and provides courses which prepare the student for college courses in engineering and science.

Lane Tech was named after Albert Grannis Lane, an educator born in Chicago in 1841. He was a member of Chicago's first high school graduating class in 1858. Soon after his graduating, he was appointed principal of the Franklin Public School, which was located at Sedgwick and Division, the later site of the first Lane Tech building. After ten years of service, he was elected Superintendent of the County Schools and in 1891 he was persuaded to leave the county work and become Superintendent of the Chicago Schools. He spent the remainder of his life in this work. Lane died on August 22, 1906, with many plans still unfulfilled. During his lifetime Mr. Lane showed many examples of his outstanding integrity. At one time when an investment of the Board of Education's money proved to be a total loss, Mr. Lane, who had been indirectly connected with the investment, thought it his duty to repay the loss, which was in the tens of thousands of dollars. He did this in small payments from his own salary and he spent many years of his life in paying his self-assumed debt.

The main branch of the Lane Tech at Sedgwick and Division opened its doors to 1200 students in September, 1908. The school expanded so rapidly that five other branches were soon opened: the Sheldon branch at State and Elm, the Kinzie branch at LaSalle and Ohio, the Franklin Branch on Beethoven, the Adams Branch on Townsend near Chicago, and the Stanley Branch at Franklin and Huron. By 1930 the school had an enrollment of 7000. To handle this overload, 60 rooms scattered throughout the neighborhood and many vacant stores were rented for the use as classrooms.

Phoenix Hall, Seward Park, North Side Turner Hall, the Lake Shore Playground, and Lincoln Park were used for gym and ROTC classes, and the Moody Tabernacle was used as the assembly hall. This tremendous popularity was due to the new courses offered by Lane Tech. Four-year courses in technology, architecture, and general trades were offered, in addition to a two-year course which led to a trade apprenticeship. In 1912, the school opened a pre-vocational department, which provided special training in technical subjects for advanced sixth, seventh, and eighth grade boys. A junior college and a night school were also a part of Lane Tech's services.

STILL ESSENTIALLY QUIET, the library nevertheless has a different atmosphere than the empty room of 1934

...from then until now

Toward the end of the 1920's, the need for a new school building became almost urgent. Through the hard work of Mr. William Bogan, who was Lane's first principal (in the original building) and at the time was Superintendent of Schools, a grant was obtained and the present building was built at Addison and Western. The building was completed in plenty of time to accept its first class in September of 1934. After the big move was completed, the old building at Sedgwick and Division became Washburne Trade School. The school public address system, connecting all the class rooms with the office, was completed in the following year. During World War II our present football stadium was built

The present school offers five major courses: Technical-College Preparatory, Commercial Art-College Preparatory, Architectural-College Preparatory, Music-College Preparatory, and Smith - Hughes courses in machine shop, print shop, auto shop, and art

ACTIVITY once non-existent is now a keyword in the office foyer

The renowned name of Lane has attracted many outstanding individuals who supervise and coordinate the various activities of our school. They govern our school in an efficient and orderly manner, supplying the school's needs and always striving to improve the instruction and welfare of each individual student

At the head of this organization is the principal, and helping him to perform his duties are the assistant principals and various counselors. They are invaluable to our principal in maintaining a liaison between Lane and the outside world and by relieving him of part of his overwhelming burden

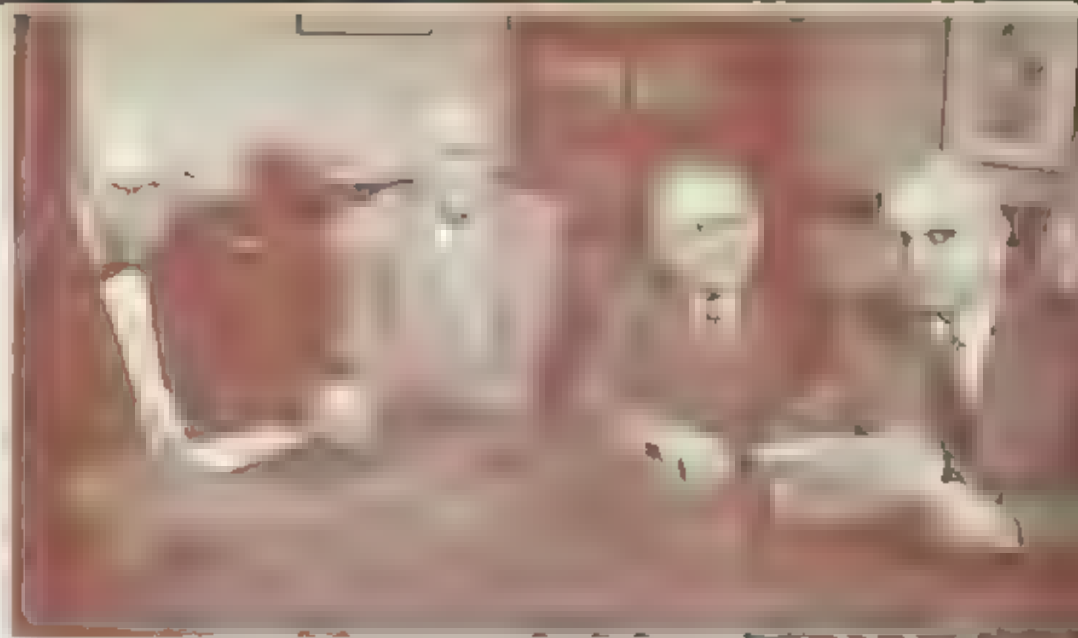

THE KEYSTONE of our progressive faculty is our capable principal, Dr. Arthur P. O' Mara. His unusually active interest in school functions is evidenced by his frequent visits to all parts of the building. Inspired by his leadership, students and teachers continue to build the already fine reputation of Lone Tech. Dr. O'Mara, who has been our principal for three years, also lectures at Loyola University Graduate School. Math, astronomy, bowling, and Pontiacs are a few of his many interests. These, together with his sympathetic sensitivity, qualify him eminently as principal of the finest technical high school in the world.

DISCUSSING PLANS for the improvement of the school is regularly done by the administrators. Dr. O'Mara consults with Mr. Meierdierks, assistant principal in charge of personnel; Mr. Straka, shop superintendent, and Mr. Hawver, assistant principal who programs classes. Mr. Rotha, assistant principal who schedules school events is usually present to give his invaluable assistance

The diversities in our service organizations would fill volumes. Yet they do have at least one thing in common besides giving service. As with any other organizations, they exist solely to unify the work of their members. Our service organizations give the individual a chance to grow, both as an individual and into something greater than himself. The service organization tries to make Lane a school of individuals and for individuals, by helping individuals work together.

Honor comes after service. Our honor societies offer the hard worker a chance to bask in the warm rays of glory. It is interesting to note that Lane has no memorial honor society. Laneites are not honored for having done something, but for doing.

QUESTIONS are often raised by delegates such as Saperstein, Begun, and Papke in student council sessions

The Student Budget is regulated by the Council. The amount of money from each student to support the Lane Daily, to give to charities, and the other causes, is appropriated by the pupils themselves, through their student government

The Student Council is an experiment in democracy, a very successful experiment, whereby the student, through the representative of his division, has a say in the laws which affect himself and his school. By this means, the relationship between the pupil and Lane is furthered since he takes an active part in the control, maintenance, and functioning of his school

The Student Court was acquired by the council to maintain justice in the disciplinary control of Lane. In the Court, a boy has a chance to explain and defend himself, a privilege that he would not have, were there no Student Court

Another vanguard of the big parade which passes through Lane will leave the School of Champions after having evolved from Freshmen to Seniors. One faction of these Laneites will leave us in January, the other in June, but we think of our Seniors as a whole group, each individual having contributed to the greatness of Lane

Students of special merit and popularity have been elected to the various offices of the Senior Class. The class president, vice-president, and other officers, as well as the chairmen of the various committees, devote their time and work to serve their fellow graduates in a special way. It is true that these Seniors are leaving us and that others will come and take their places, but what they have done will remain in Lane's history forever!

HEADS SWOLLEN, the seniors are measured for caps and gowns.

The big two, Math and English, are the cornerstones of every education. They are the basic means of expression, verbally and numerically. It is inevitable that we encounter both in every phase of our lives; in fact, our way of life is a result of their influences. Here at Lane we endeavor to place as much emphasis on English and Math as possible, as the fine teaching staff in each department will readily assert. We know that these mentors of education will influence our destiny and thus produce students well informed in both English and Math

SORRY, NO women allowed here. Oop's, I beg your pardon, sir!

Ever since the Mask and Shears of the old Lane hired the Athenian Theater for four nights, it has always presented farce, because that form of drama has something for everyone. "The Blue Ghost" of this 1957-58 season was fun for the greenest freshie as well as his seasoned dad. A farce well done gives us the priceless gift of being able to laugh at ourselves.

What is music? The dictionary gives a good definition, but every person has his own ideas of the subject which produces everything from symphonies to popular songs. To accommodate these taste variants, Lane has a well-rounded music department which consists of a choral group, symphony orchestra, and concert, march, and swing bands.

With such fine groups, and each under the baton of an excellent conductor, Lane offers an unsurpassed music department which, year after year, receives ratings of "Superior." The orchestra, choral group, and bands, after teaching the boys to play instruments and appreciate music, perform for the students at the many festive assemblies, so that whether they like the classics or something with a beat, they can enjoy music.

An orchestra is a democratic organization. Through our own symphony orchestra many gifted individuals are given a chance to express themselves. The need for a government is met by the conductor, Mr. Schneider, and the concert master, R. Schutt, who justifiably carry themselves proudly, in itself an accomplishment, for all the medals that have been won are a great weight on the chest. Besides making sure that the only director of the baton is the composer, they lead people into contributing their particular skills to the organization as a whole. When that is done many voices are unified into one song of life.

The Lane Chorus is the youngest member of our musical department, being about six years old. In the few short years of its existence, this organization has achieved phenomenal success. Maintaining the typically high standards of Lane, the Chorus has managed with ease to sustain a top grade rating for every year's appearance since its founding, in the Chicago Choral Competitions. The mature approach and enthusiastic attitude of these, our talented fellow Laneites coupled with the direction of Mr. Lombardo, have given our Chorus a place of distinction in the musical world

The concert band is an integral part of Lane's music department. Its fame is not restricted merely to our school. As a result of the bestowal of countless honors and awards upon it through these many years, the band has gained the respect and recognition of the informed of our society. This group is also one of Lane's oldest organizations. A contributing factor to the department's traditional success is its huge library containing many treasured volumes of the finest music. Directed by Captain Huff, the boys in our concert band will continue to respond ably to the exacting requisites of producing the truly grand music so rightfully associated with them.

Those subjects which make our lives more interesting and enjoyable here at Lane are the graphic arts. These activities educate individuals so that they may entertain others. These pursuits range from extra-curricular activities to the regular credit courses. All of these functions enable the student to advance himself whether he goes in the shop or office. By becoming better men in their respective fields, they reflect credit upon Lane and its graphic arts department.

Throughout Lane's fifty years there has always been a publication representing the school. In the early years the book was a catalog of items, produced at Lane. Since then the contents of the book have been changed to an interesting, informative, well-rounded collection of pictures and print. The Yearbook has been published twice a year since 1908, and not until now has it come out annually. For the first time, the name of the book is the Arrowhead, a title chosen from contest entries made by the students at Lane.

The Tech Prep has been published since 1914, when it was a monthly magazine. Since then it has been bi-monthly, and at present is a semester publication. The Tech Prep has been rated All-American and has won many other high honors

During the past fifty years the various staffs

has its own particular job to do. The hard work and co-operation of these staffs make possible this and other Lane publications
The Arrowhead, Daily, and Tech Prep staffs are the minds behind these printed pages.

Each group writes and edits its respective literature. Every publication must be sold, the business staff sells and distributes the Lane Arrowhead and Tech Prep. Our publications must have photographs and illustrations in order to be interesting to the reader; this work is done by our photo and art staffs. The culmination of all the staffs' efforts is the printing of our fine Lane publications, which are so much a part of our school.

The enormous and exacting job of keeping Lane supplied with hundreds of school forms, programs, announcements, and multiple other papers rests on the shoulders of the able printers. Among their various projects are the production of the Lane Arrowhead, Tech Prep, and Lane Daily. They must be adept not only at type setting, lockup, composing, and other functions which are a part of their occupation, but they must be proficient in the usage of the English language. How rewarding it is to see their finished work come rolling off the presses!

Lane Tech is one of the few high schools in the United States which has a daily newspaper. It is printed and published by the students of the school, and contains top editorials, entertainment, and current news. For many years the news of the school was published in the Tech Prep Magazine but a need for a daily paper arose. Since then fresh news has been supplied every day. The Camera Club, sponsored by Mr. Siedband, was organized in 1935. Box cameras were used by students in these early days of the club. Today the club members use the latest releases in photographic equipment and produce some very good pictures. If you are interested in photography and its development you might see Mr. Siedband about joining the club. It's quite informative and fun.

When students take lithography under Mr. Losee, they learn more than a method of printing. Art, chemistry and photography are other important parts of this valuable skill. During the semester the class visits major companies and sees demonstrations of equipment. Thus, general knowledge and a valuable skill may both be gained in this shop.

The Laneite starts to learn the stages of technical construction from the beginning of his high school education at Lane. He develops his skills in all phases of the work, from the time he spends at the drafting board to the industrious hours in workshops. Wood, electric, foundry, or sheet metal, the student is getting experience from our well-equipped school. Lane has eighteen drafting rooms and fifty shops to give the Laneite a broad technical training, which is all so necessary in this day and age.

Chisels, hammers, saws, and sandpaper are some of the first pieces of equipment every Lane boy encounters, as his first shop course is usually woodworking. The purpose of this shop is to give the student knowledge in this valuable skill and to develop his creative ability. At first he must learn to use tools with accuracy. After he masters the basic skills, he begins to make his own project, possibly a lamp or footstool. The techniques which he learns here will be of benefit to him as a vocation or an avocation.

Students who work in plastic shop are acquiring a knowledge of one of the fastest growing industries in America. Plastics are used almost everywhere, it is difficult to find any machinery which isn't constructed partly of plastics. Guided by Mr. Brinkman's expert instruction, the students learn to make letter peners, pen and napkin holders, lamps, and many other useful items. They design, cut, file, buff, and then bend each item. At the end of the semester a contest is held, and each student exhibits a product which he chose to make.

They learn many basic operations in machine shop, such as threading, tapering, and finishing raw material. Among the more advanced jobs are a surface gauge and an all-purpose tool holder.

With furnaces blasting, incandescent iron comes spewing forth into the sand-filled flask. From another metal working shop comes the ringing of steel on the red-hot pieces held tightly in the tongs. With the beginning of a structural steel drafting class this semester, the list of specialized courses offered has taken a big step forward. In drawing, however, one must learn the language before attempting the dialects. At Lane, Mr. Schwartz and his colleagues teach both the language and its dialects at the same time by teaching the language through the dialects. Thus, when we take architectural drawing we learn not only that, but also what is basic in it to all forms of drawing. Drawings made in the architectural course are good examples what all draftsmen try to do. The construction and appearance of even the most complicated building must be described with a bare minimum of words. The thing most basic to this and all parts of the wide field of drawing is accuracy, to the extent that more than a thousand lines may be required to delineate one minute detail in decoration. Basic drawing courses are required of all Lane students, and the more advanced ones are available to specialized students of drafting.

A combination of English, mechanical drawing, and mathematics is a requirement for participation in the Aviation Sheet Metal Shop. The main function is to acquaint the student with aircraft sheet metal and its uses. At first the student becomes acquainted with the machinery and then does practical work with aluminum. The students become proficient in the use of the pneumatic and air riveter and learn how to make templates and patterns of different kinds. The natural sciences include everything from the general study of the mysterious world of the microscope to the definite composition of compounds. In the first year the student begins his scientific education with a general survey of the theory and practice, in a course called general science. During his second year he branches out into different facts of natural science. His first specific course deals with the study of living organisms, biology. In his third year he enters into the study of physics, which teaches him of the physical laws of nature. This is closely followed by a sister science, chemistry, which deals with the atomic and molecular composition of compounds. With four years of the excellent training in these natural sciences the student has gained an immeasurable wealth of knowledge of the universe about him.

From evaporating dishes come crystals and salts; acids pour down the funnel tube, flames spurt from the Bunsen burner; and heaven knows what residue remains in the Florence flask as a Lane student performs one of his two weekly experiments in chemistry. These wanderings into the world of components of matter in solid, liquid, and gaseous states, from the molecule to compounds and mixtures, as oxides or dioxides or trioxides or as pentoxides, enable him to understand more truly the earth around him. He acquires this understanding in lecture rooms with all the charts and drawings that are necessary to teach this difficult but essential science, and in labs well stocked with chemicals whose names range from acetate to zinc.

Lane, along with the many large technical institutions throughout the country, offers a social science program to insure a well-rounded education to its students. The world history course presents a foundation for building a liberal outlook and concrete understanding of foreign ideals. United States history, as taught at Lane, illustrates the constant endeavors to preserve freedom and self-expression. Patriotic interest is aroused as the American story is told, from the Landing of the Pilgrims to the Korean War. The civics courses mold and develop the citizens of tomorrow by teaching the regulations (and the principles behind them) that comprise our code of living. The language courses teach a new culture as well as a new tongue. To students wishing to discover new countries, this department offers a choice of German, Latin, Polish, and Spanish

The study of history tells us what has gone before and indicates what may come. The Lone student may take world history if he so chooses but he is required to take U.S. history and civics, the study of our country's government. History can be found in our coins and stamps, too. Numismatists, coin collectors, have coins which represent different years or different countries. Philatelists, stamp collectors, deal with stamps both U.S. and foreign, each representing perhaps a historical event, place or person. Thus the study of stamps or coins can be one means of studying history.

With military precision and bearing the student becomes experienced in citizenship, leadership, and self discipline. Much of the responsibility of training an entire regiment is taken over by the cadets themselves. A twofold purpose is accomplished by allowing qualified cadets to instruct. They gain invaluable experience in giving these classes, while their students receive expert training

The Reserve Officers Training Corps here at Lane, itself an honor regiment, has within it several extracurricular honor groups and teams. The Color Guard, Rifle Team, Crack Drill, and Exhibition Teams render important services to both the school and the Regiment

"READY—AIM—FIRE" are the commands that may be heard every day in 037, which is the rifle range. Under the watchful eye of "Sarge" otherwise known as M/Sgt. Bailey, the boys practice firing in all positions in preparation for the difficult rifle matches that occur throughout the year. Our sharpshooters had a very good season in the fall semester, and from what "Sarge" says we here at Lane can expect a lot of new records to be set by our junior Day Crocketts

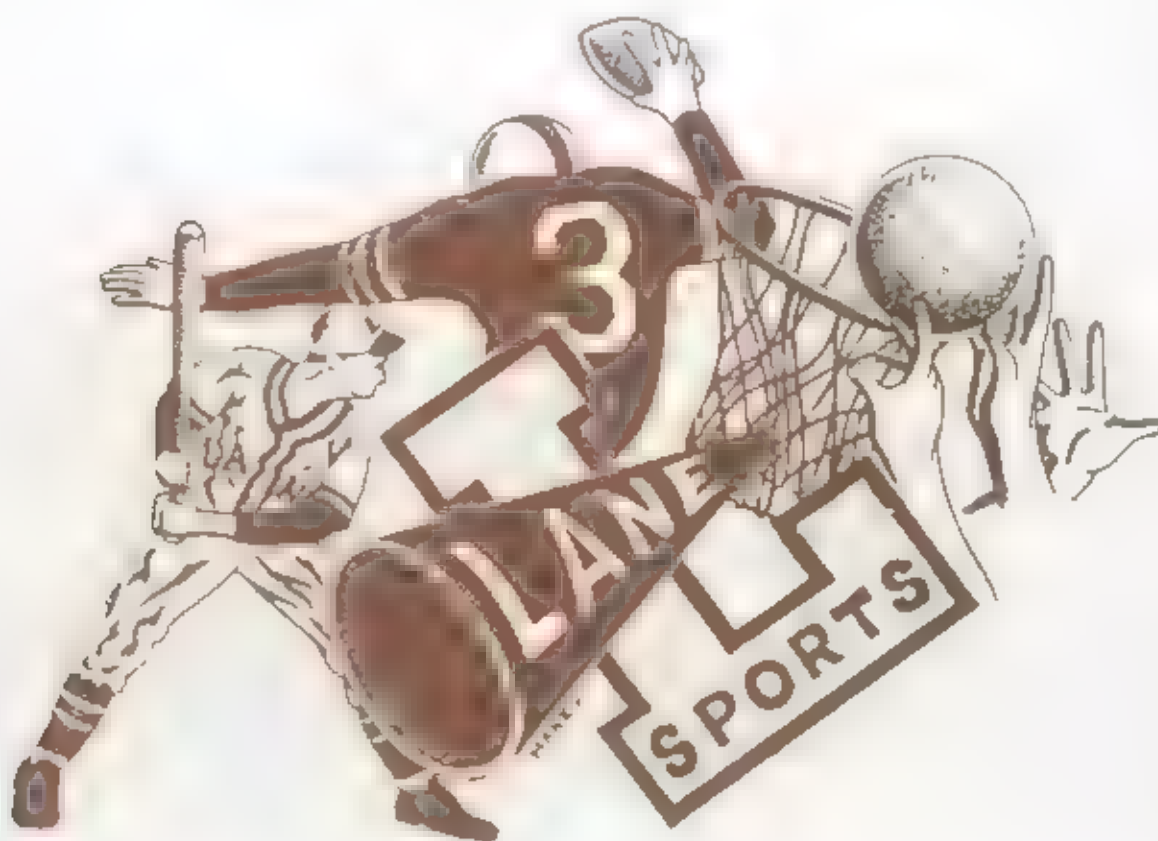

IMPORTANT POINTS of the Carbine are pointed out to Nasuta and Krause

DEMONSTRATING the four positions of rifle marksmanship are Smith, Moeller, Bergstrom and Krause

The word "athletics" comes from the Greek and means to contend for a prize. Under this heading come all sports in which team competes against team, or individual with individual. The chief sports at Lane are football, basketball, and baseball. Many sports performed in ancient Greece in the Olympics, such as wrestling, field events, track, and gymnastics are still preserved at Lane. The new as well as old thrive here, and we have achieved championships in most branches of the physical education program. Presented to you in these following pages are your teams, each year adding more fame and honor to the "School of Champions"

Greco-Roman wrestling, where a fall or bout is won by pinning the opponent's shoulders to the ground is executed with championship skill and style by Lane's "Matmen". Under the excellent training of Coach Manasin, Lane wrestlers have acquired two second, two third, and two fourth places in the city finals as well as having placed two men in the state playoffs. In all the "Matmen" have won four matches and lost four. Again in the 1958 season hopes are high for the city or state championship.

THE COUNT is started by referee Altenburg as ... his man.

Constantly watching for those swimmers who can't are Mr. Pegel's lifeguards. In spite of rumors to the contrary, these boys can really swim! Candidates must pass rigorous tests before they can become a lifeguard. They have established a fine record for quick, sure thinking whenever it is necessary for them to go into action.

Many lifeguards become members of the swim team. Coach Swenson has done a fine job of training these boys, for they have shown again that Lone is the team to beat.

LEAPING AT the gun's call are Faerman and Schultz.

"BLOCK THAT KICK — HOLD THAT LINE". These are the sounds which the men of the football team become familiar with in their course of practice. Coaches Manasin and Labant teach the boys blocking, passing, running, and the spirit of sportmanship which make an A-1 team. The boys had an excellent record of seven wins and one loss last season. This year's team has the same fighting spirit as its predecessors and we here at Lane may expect great things from future teams

This year Lane's Cagers walked away with another sectional title championship. Their nearly perfect season record was a result of the combination of Mr. Buchanan's fine leadership and the great teamwork of all the boys. There were no individual stars, but the team working as a group kept to the job and did it well.

The Lane crew led in its first day of practice on March 22nd. The oarsmen this year have their work cut out for them. Only a few of last year's lettermen are returning; therefore the new men are faced with the task of retaining the Central States Rowing Championship, which was won by the '57 team. If these young men succeed in keeping the crown, they will likely follow in the steps of last season's crew and participate in the national competition at the Royal Canadian Henley Regatta, held in Ontario, Canada. According to the coach, the possibility of a winning boat is progressing.

Soccer, the ancestor of modern American football, was generally recognized in the United States in 1913. Our own Lane "Ironheads" were winning championships before that—1908 was our first. Again in the 1957 season the soccer team has been undefeated with such scores as

Lane 9	Ook Park 0
Lane 10	Oak Park 0
Lane 24	Von Steuben 0
Lane 10	Morton 6

A record like this is not achieved without hard work, plenty of practice, and inspired training by Coach McDade.

Since 1934 when it was first organized by Coach Jmbright, the Lane Golf Team has been striving for the City Championship. They have won it twice, in '38 and '50, and also took a close second in '57. With all the team back and with the excellent guidance of Coach Buchanan, hopes are high for another championship in '58.

Our business managers are solely devoted to the publicity of the teams. They put up signs announcing various contests, sell tickets to all the games; and after those games, to figure out the attendance, they count all the tickets. They assist Coach Schaefer in the managing of the business of sports events.

The skating team, whose past record is laden with many trophies, medals, and laurels, has proved itself worthy of more such awards. This year the Junior team took first place in every event to strike an overwhelming victory over all other Chicago high schools. At the same meet the Seniors won second place.

High hurdles, triple broad jump, mile relay, and shot put are but a few of the sixteen different activities of the Lane Tech Track Team. With enthusiasm and perseverance, a boy may become a track and field star. Those not suited for short dashes or hurdles may discover talent for high jump or mile run. The indoor season was climaxed this year by our winning the coveted City Championship title for the first time in forty-six years. The team is now sprinting and jumping its way toward an outdoor season victory.

CHA-CHA-CHA or bowling?

MATTES put it "in the groove"

"I'm from Smith's division" is not an uncommon statement, although the name varies. Boys are often not considered as individuals, but as members of Smith's or Jones' or Zarelskelli's division because that way, records may be easily kept, the boy is represented in the student council, and things such as lost books may be returned to him. When the boy is in the division meeting once each day, he can clear up his records, hand in or receive his course book, get his copy of the Lane Daily, and hear the often vital bulletin which contains facts and notices that may affect him in the days to come

For maximum efficiency, the student body is divided into more than a hundred and fifty groups or teams of about thirty boys each. These teams often compete in games, and as groups, they have representatives in the student council and in the distribution of the Arrowhead and, in the case of senior divisions, on important graduating committees. Each group is headed by a teacher who must keep the boys under his or her wing.

These divisions are but molecules which contain the important atoms, the basic element of the school—the boys.

ELLA BARRETT

Though devoted to her native Chicago the world was her home , and she traveled extensively, visiting Mexico, South America, Europe, Canada, and Alaska. All of our words, however, could not express our thoughts as well as the words of one of Miss Barrett's closest associates when she stated "She was a truly cultured person and her death was a real loss to the youth of Chicago."

HELEN SHERBAHN

In her early days at Lane Miss Sherbahn sponsored a public speaking and debating society known as Forum; the students she tutored in this organization won contest after contest in inter-school competitions. But her services did not end there, as the boys soon became accustomed to taking her their problems and aspirations, until she became both their confidante and counsellor. And so passed our way a kind, an unselfish, a warmly affectionate colleague and friend.

Epilogue

Greatness Through Advancement

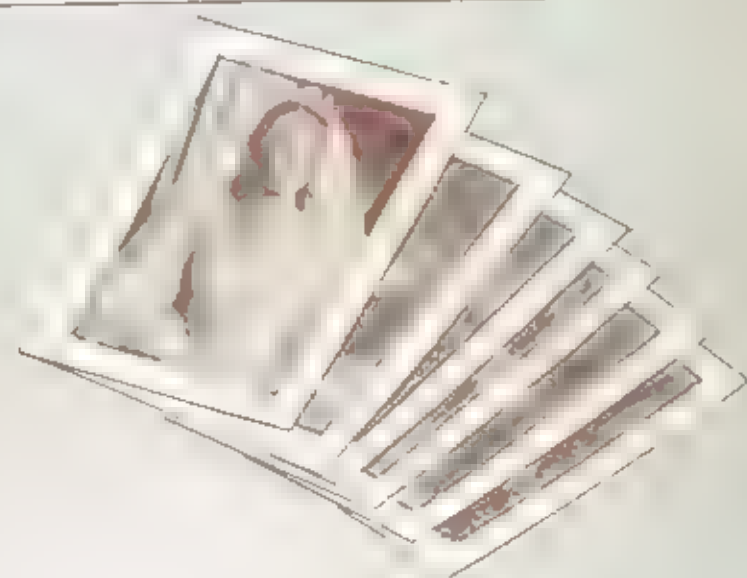

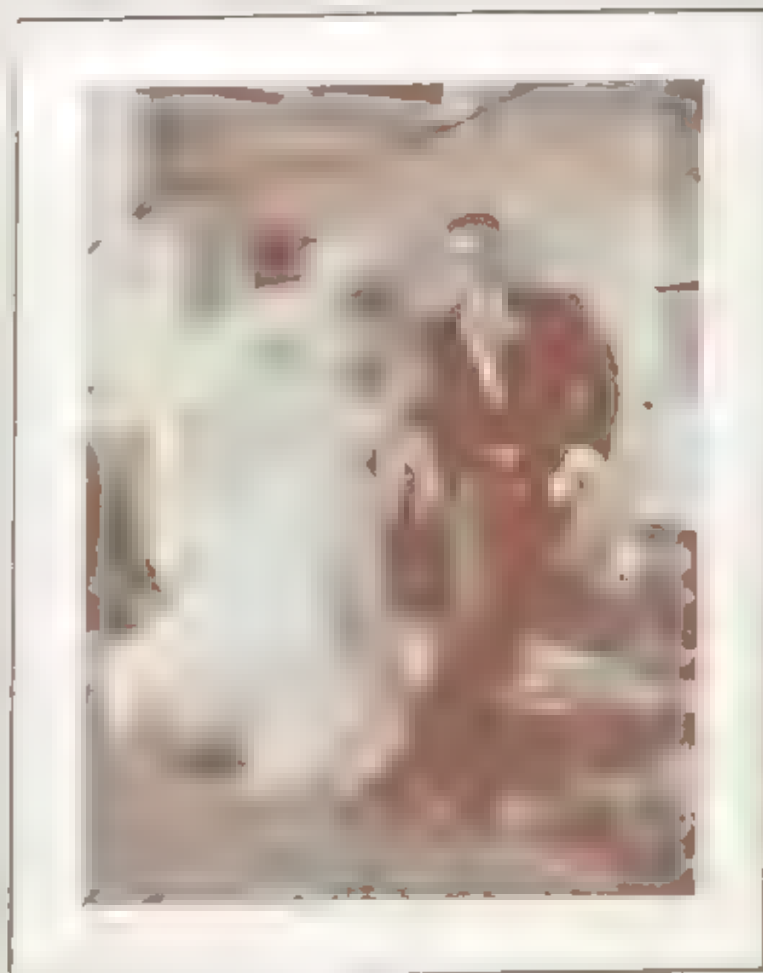

This school and this publication can not keep its eyes continually on the road behind. As soon as it passes the milestone, their heads will turn and they shall see what lies before them. The road will look no different save that their shadows are behind them and ahead of them is the sun, brighter than ever.

Footsteps are yet to be implanted in the dust, memories are yet to be gathered, records are yet to be broken and set, titles are yet to be won, friendships are yet to be made, and lessons on school subjects, on how to act as a gentleman, citizen, and scholar are yet to be taught. They will be implanted gathered broken set won made and taught. They shall be. And when they are implanted, gathered broken set won made and taught, then there shall walk from the doors of Lane men men who have difficult and wonderful times, men who have passed with ease or difficulty, men who will use what they have received from this institution wisely, or not so wisely; nevertheless, they will be men.

Our future lies with them

Cherished Memories

When that cherished day arrives you'll want a living record made by a professional photographer. After the words have been said, the food eaten and the refreshments consumed, the only record of the day with all your friends will be your wonderful portraits.

ROOT will record your candid wedding story with the delicate touch of an artist. For pre-bridal, engagement or other formal portraits, ROOT has seven complete mobile studios for portraits at your home, church, reception or in our downtown studio. Free inside parking across the street at Peerless Service Parking.

A SPECIAL 20% DISCOUNT to readers of this ad on Candid Wedding Portraits mounted in a beautiful album.
